on the evening of May 19, just after the first bout had started.

Many times before the managers and principals of athlelic clubs have been arrested and taken to the police courts to be arraigned for alleged violations of the Horton law, but invariably the prisoners were freed when they showed that only estensible members had been admitted. This Madison Square Garden affair, however, was conducted on a different basis.

Detective Cuizzo, of Headquarters, testified that he went to the Hotel Barthold where he had heard admissions were being openly bought and sold. Peligrine approached him he said, and volunteered to sell him tickets. He paid is for tickets for himself and a companion. When they went to the Garden, presented the tickets to Moore, who acted as ticket man, and were admitted without question. Hurst was arresied because he was acting as referee and manager. Lowing was in the ring at the time of the raid. His opponent content of matches.

Tomorrow, We Shall Sell Delightful Little Dresses of Light-Colored Habutai Silk And of Darker Imported Foulards

> At $6 Each With unlimited choice, we could not have selected anything more seasonable; nor could we have arranged a greater surprise for you in the way of extra quality.

The story is one we have had occasion to repeat frequently of late—a manufacturer struggling to keep together during the dull period the trained working organization which is of so great importance during the busy season—with plenty of silks in his safes but with no orders to make

But the dresses are the things you are most interested in-the pretty summer styles worked out in feather-weight airy Japanese silks that are about as perishable as a pocket-handkerchief, and occupy very little more room in the trunk or bag.

We saw a European-bound trunk recently with nine such dresses packed in the space of one woolen garment. Imagine a linen suit emerging from such tight quarters. Yet those dresses will be fresh as a flower when unpacked.

The Habutais are in stripes of delicate blue on a white ground trimmed with plain blue. One style is a coat effect, with sailor collar, the other is collarless and buttons at the back.

The Foulard Patterns are Particularly Good bordered effects, and unusual dots and checkerboard squares in blue and white that we had to hunt for in Paris at the opening of the season. We sketch only one of the several charming summer styles. At the well-known cost of imported foulard silks, it is readily figured that the maker was in desperate straits when he gave us these dresses to sell at $6.

EXTRA—A hundred or more fine white all-over embroidery and lace lingerie dresses that were $7.50 and $10, get a new price of $6.

Recent experiences prompt us to advise early attendance at this sale in the Basement, Broadway front of the Old Building. Ready at 8.30.
